

James Fort

Your Labour Party candidate for Twyford

The Local Choice

With the usual party banners, it is easy to forget that council elections are about local issues.

Like the library. Libraries are the core of our community. The council's privatisation plans put the future of our libraries at risk. Twyford deserves a modern library to serve as a focal point for the community.

Like efficient waste collection. The new waste collection scheme introduced by the council is costing people money on top of their council tax. In 2012 having waste collected efficiently and in an environmentally friendly way is a right.

On May 3rd 2012 you have an opportunity to vote for a local man with a long standing commitment to Twyford and the people of the village.

James Fort has lived in Twyford all his life and works as a solicitor in Slough. He served for over 20 years as a parish councillor, and chairman of the Polehampton Charities. In addition, he has served for 23 years on the management committee of Twyford Youth Centre, and is a member of Twyford Cricket Club

Following his interest in local history, he has been a member of Twyford History Society, of which is chairman. He is also vice-chairman of Hurst Charities, which is responsible for the almshouses in Twyford.

He has a well-established track record of serving the people of Twyford.

Labour: with you in tough times

Across the country, Labour councils and councillors are making tough but fair choices to protect families and frontline services.

Labour candidates like James Fort are rooted in their local communities and understand the challenges and pressures that families face. We know that people are feeling the squeeze on their standard of living and their family finances. That's why only Labour councillors can be relied upon to stand up for fairness in tough times.

Across Britain, Labour councillors are fighting to protect frontline services and keep people in work – supporting businesses and local economic recovery. Difficult choices have to be made - all councils are having to find savings as a result of deep cuts to their funding from the Government, which go too far and too fast – but Labour will make the tough choices to ensure that we can still deliver fairness even when there is less money around.

Voting Labour in the local elections means voting for councillors who will stand up for local communities, working to find savings wherever they can – such as in the back office, and on senior pay – in order to protect the services families rely on while keeping council tax down

Labour is with you:

- Labour councils cost you less. On average council tax payers in Labour controlled areas pay less than those in Tory-led areas
- Facing deep cuts to their funding, which go too far and too fast, Labour councils are taking tough choices to protect families and communities
- Labour councils across the country are delivering fairness in tough times, taking action to protect the vital local services people rely on.
- Labour councils will tackle anti-social behaviour, including prioritising support for Police Community Support Officers and using all the powers they have to clamp down on troublemakers.
